Snack Sized Stories and Munchable bits…

Steve Gray

Are there words to say how challenging life is?

For some the noise and bustle of the world is enough to make life treacherous…

Life to them is clearly more than words.

Some word combinations can solicit the desire to nourish the soul.

Some words foster the curious.

Challenge the senses and jangle the nerves.

Maybe it is, or perhaps the opposite is true.

Maybes are all about possibilities. But do they always deliver hope?

Will the ladder get our guy out of the void?

Be true to yourself, if that means you need to be guarded then so be it.

Hold on to that detached sense, who cares if people don't understand.

Hold tight to the reins, life can be a beast…

Black, yes,
colours?
Perhaps in small doses.

Hero? Why?

Be a star, have a sword, but make it a symbol, not a flippant tool.

Defy, you know no choice, watch, listen, learn.

They don't know your style of language, they don't seem to understand your difference.

Listen - Explore. Respond with grace where you can!

The little things, things that matter. Statements, graphic reminders.

Colour your world your way, make clear messages, make messy communication.

Be subtle, be bold, be energetic in your own sweet way.

It's complex,
you know it,
they may not.

Your path is just that,
yours, it might be very different from other ways forward.

It may even seem a bit backward at times, but you can still grow!

You focus on what works for you, others may see it as dismissive.

Look at me when you're talking, no thanks, I will stay true to what works for me!

See the world for what it is, a place to explore, your way!

It's your world, your space, your domain.

Doors are there for a reason, if you want it shut. Then so be it.

Stand guard to the doors of your mind. Keep what you want in, and what you don't want out.
